Whitt 5.0 out of 5 stars This is a no-brainer for anyone who has Time Warner. The remote codes can be found by Google. However, there are TONS of remotes that look identical or similar to this that DO NOT work with Time Warner.This one, of course did work with Time Warner. So there was the hassle of returning the other one from a different seller.The old remote had numbers wearing off and I had to push really hard to get the buttons to register. The new remote came in and is now working like a dream. It took some doing to program the remote. I was able to program my TV just fine but for some reason it wasn't allowing me to program the cable box. It turns out that the button for cable box comes prelocked. You have to unlock the cable button before you can program it. I got her this as a surprise last Christmas and not only did it work right off the bat, it is still working this day. <http://carexline.ru/generic/uploaded/buy-manual-vacuum-aspiration-kit.xml>

I am so happy we don't have to struggle like crazy just to change the channel anymore! If you have a DVR may not work. Be sure to check. We would be able to unlock our doors, adjust the thermostat and start the car with our phones right now, but the doors, thermostats and cars need to have the high tech and expensive components in them in order to respond to the remote, and at present they are few and far between. In the meantime, we have another wonder called Peel, and it has been created by former Apple engineers to work with iPhones, iPod Touches and iPads. Support for Android phones is in the pipeline. Peel is a combination of hardware and software that will not only be able to replace the multiple remote controls that we all seem to have scattered through our homes though we can never find the one that we want, but will also enable us to sort out our channels so we never need to remember what number our favourite ones are. Peel works by using a small infrared receiver, which the makers call a Fruit, and it runs off a Ccell battery. The wireless communication that is necessary between the Peel and your iPhone takes no more than five minutes to set up and will have you finding programmes that you didn't even know existed within moments. The interface is user friendly and uses photos and icons instead of boring text, and you will be able to use it with all of your entertainment systems such as DVD players and DVRs. So there are different types of remote. My model number is CLC501. Did you. They usually can help you the best to get the right codes,. Any tips to reduce the Crazyness. Both services will be back up beginning at 7 a.m. on July 25. Thank you for your patience and we apologize for any inconvenience. You will then be taken to the page that will walk you through programming your remote. CableOne is only able to offer you support for the remotes that we offer to you.

The button will have an icon that looks like a lightbulb. On other backlit hardbutton remotes, the button doesnt exist or doesnt work. In that case a 974 command might be available. To test, TAP and release the device key in which the new feature was learned followed by the key on which the feature was learned. NOTE To learn to a shift key, simply TAP SETUP before TAPing the key in step 4 above. Sets like new remote. If the remote is an upgradeable remote, and has codes added, this will delete those codes also. Shifted Keys It is possible to store two commands on one button by using the SHIFT key.

The SETUP button acts as a shift key. When programming individual buttons, whether by learning or by using advanced codes, if you TAP SETUP before selecting the button where the command will be assigned, the function will be stored on the shifted version of the button. Then when you wish to use the button, TAP SETUP before you TAP the button. Shifted keys can be used for learned commands, commands programmed using advanced codes and for macros. This is your signature code. Punch through will occur in these modes. The 977 command restores the settings. This is your setup code. You may have to TAP this sequences of buttons up to 100 times to search the entire library of codes. The led will blink twice when there are no more codes to test.
